The HOA payment (lockbox) teams process mail as soon as it is received and continually communicate with the USPS about the importance of the mail being delivered in a timely manner.

Owner involvement in the care and development of their new community is key to the financial well-being and healthy enjoyment of their home and neighborhood.

The HOA Board offers e-Statements which allows funding of other critical items.

Your HOA Board of Directors (BOD) has e-Statements sent via email or paper statements via US mail only as a courtesy reminder. Statements, however, are not required for owners to pay dues. All owners are bound to pay per the terms of the HOA Governing Docs. (CC&Rs or Bylaws)

Condo owners in San Diego have several responsibilities towards their communities. Here are some of the key general responsibilities.

Please review your CCRs for more specific info:

1. Your Unit: Condo owners are responsible for their own units, which includes the floors, walls, ceilings, and everything else that makes up the unit¹.
2. Appliances: Any appliances in your unit, including water heaters, ovens, and HVAC systems, will be your responsibility. You'll need to repair them yourself and replace them when they no longer work¹.
3. The Units Plumbing: Plumbing that goes through the condos public areas is normally handled by the condo association, but any pipes that go through your unit may be your responsibility¹.
4. Some Electrical: In most condos, anything that's meant to serve a single unit will be the responsibility of that unit's owner¹.
5. Condo Association Fees: One of the most important things owners are responsible for is condo association dues. These dues are essentially your share of the fees for handling maintenance, amenity upgrades, and building repairs¹.
6. Private Areas Attached to Your Unit: You'll be responsible for any private areas attached to your unit, such as a private yard, a balcony, a garage, or a deck¹.
7. Doors & Windows: Some buildings require condo owners to maintain their own external doors, windows, and shutters, while others consider those items part of the building that's managed by the HOA¹.

Remember, these responsibilities can vary depending on the specific rules of your condo association, so it's always a good idea to read your condo agreement carefully¹.
